OTPOR AND SRDJA POPOVICCATEGORIES: Guides & Books, Insider InfoGet Directions: Belgrade, Serbia

When Milosevic was in charge of Serbia, it was hard to voice dissent, so people would not usually talk about the dictatorship and how bad things were. However, little by little, they started seeing signs all over Belgrade that there was a movement, later called Otpor, planning a kind of silent demonstration against the ruthless ruler. Public opinion slowly galvanized against him, culminating in the victory of the opposition in the elections.

There is a book about him and Otpor. Nowadays his tactics are used all over the world. The Arab Spring, for example, has Popovic's know-how behind many of the Egyptian and Tunisian activists. If you do not want to read the book, at least read this article on The Guardian and see how Belgrade plays an important role in 21st century Facebook revolutions.

Sunday from 12noon to 8pm

Supermarket Concept Store is, like any concept store, a blend of restaurant, café, fashion store and gourmet market. There is an interesting selection of brands, both from Serbia and abroad, in a post-industrial shop, with a cool old-time communist feel. It is a good place to understand the pulse of this dynamic city, where trends from all sides have a home. Have a coffee and browse the clothes. You may find that perfect gift you were looking for.

One could say that it has been KC Grad the propeller behind the gentrification of Savamala. The independent cultural center was one of the first businesses to open up in the area once the dictator Slobodan Milosevic was gone and organisations as such could exist once again in Serbia. KC Grad has a full programming of events all year round, from music, to art, to installation and food fiestas. There is always something going on and it is a nice place to get your evening going before the other more "rowdy" joints down the street fill up. There is a corner of the cool shop Gradstore on the ground floor, near the entrance.

The Courtyard by Marriott is the most central hotel in Belgrade. More than that, it is one of the newest and its architecture is striking. Right at Republic Square, where Belgradians gather at all times of the day to meet friends, have a drink or enjoy the weather. From its entrance most attractions and areas in the city are within a 10 to 20 minute walk. Its Credo Mediterranean Restaurant is a nice option for a casual dinner or a glass of wine.

The Townhouse 27 is one of Belgrade's best hotels close to the action of Savamala. With comfortable rooms and a nice breakfast buffet, its main attraction, apart from the location, is the service, voted as warm, excellent and welcoming. Not a bad choice if you enjoy discovering local hotel brands in the mid-range bracket.

Constantine The Great is not as central as other 4-star hotels in Belgrade but it has good rates, good service and well appointed rooms. A 15-minute walk eastwards will take you to Saint Sava whereas going westwards, in another 15 minutes, you reach Savamala. I stayed there and quite liked it.

SAVA AND DANUBE PROMENADE

CATEGORIES: Keep Fit, Running Routes

Rivers Sava and Danube meet in Belgrade and there is a nice promenade along the riverbanks where you can go for a run or simply enjoy the scenery. Starting near Savamala at the Brankov Bridge, you run around Kalemegdan, the Novak Tennis Center, the funny looking concrete tower (there is a gym there) until you reach Dorcol. The paths are in good condition, there is a bike lane and there are always people around. If you are in the mood, you can even cross Brankov bridge and run on the other side, all the way to Zemun.

BELGRADE WATERFRONT

CATEGORIES: City Areas, Neighborhoods

Visit Website: <https://www.belgradewaterfront.com/en>

Get Directions: Belgrade, Serbia

From all the flags and signage seen when arriving in Belgrade one would imagine the Waterfront development is already part of the city. However, it is a very controversial undertaking that may still take years for completion. It is where the Balkans meet the Arabian Peninsula with around US$ 4 billion of Gulf money being poured in this mega-project to transform the banks of the Sava in a mini-Dubai. (sapns2.com) The local population is divided in the issue as it involves not only altering Belgrade's skyline but also making room for the ultra-rich and foreign investors who, oftentimes, disrupt the local real estate market. I guess it is a wait-and-see situation that will unfold in the next years. At least the building where the Sales Office is located has a gourmet restaurant in the heart of bohemian Savamala. If you got curious, there is this article at The Guardian about it.

KNEZA MIHAILA

CATEGORIES: City Areas, Neighborhoods, Shopping

Get Directions: Kneza Mihaila, Beograd, Serbia

Kneza Mihaila is Belgrade's main shopping street, running from Republic Square all the way to Kalemegdan Fortress. With restaurants, hotels, bars, cafés and shops, this pedestrian zone will certainly be in your itinerary as it cuts the city in half, right at its center. At any given time of the day there are people strolling its blocks. From parents with prams in the morning to revellers going out to the clubs in Savamala in the evening, it is one of the city's most democratic thoroughfares.

SAINT SAVA CHURCH

CATEGORIES: City Areas, Sights

Get Directions: Sveti Sava, Beograd, Serbia

Saint Sava is the holiest figure in Serbia and the Orthodox Serbian Church. A noble that later became monk, Saint Sava is the father of the Serbian nation, having created its first constitution. During the Ottoman occupation of Belgrade, his remains were burnt in the area where the Church now stands. It is one of the largest Orthodox churches in the world and still under construction, but you will not notice it from the outside. Only when you walk inside you see that there is still work to be done. Nevertheless, it is a must-see place in the city not only for its significance for Serbians but for the views you have from up there. The area of Vracar, around the church, is quite upscale, with many nice cafés and restaurants like Diagonala 2.0 and Mala Fabrika Ukusa.

DORĆOL

CATEGORIES: City Areas, Neighborhoods

Get Directions: Dorćol, Belgrade, Serbia

If Savamala is the bohemian neighborhood, for hard-core clubbing and heavy drinking, Dorcol is the cool one, where trendy locals go for coffee and jazz. One of Belgrade's hippest restaurants, Homa, is in the area, as well as cafés such as Przionika and Holesterol and the Radionica bar. Dorcol (pronounce Dortjol) was the Jewish neighborhood before WW2 and a very multicultural place. However, after the war, not much was left. However, it is slowly getting back to its roots as Belgrade's crossroads.

KALEMEGDAN

CATEGORIES: City Areas, Keep Fit, Neighborhoods, Running Routes

Visit Website: <http://www.beogradskatvrldjava.co.rs/?lang=en>

Get Directions: Kalemegdan, Beograd, Serbia

Kalemegdan is Belgrade's oldest structure. The fortress used to be the city itself as residents lived only within its walls. Nowadays there is a very nice park where locals come to walk their dogs, play with their children or to hug their lovers overlooking the Sava river and Novi Beograd on the opposite bank. You can visit the fortress and enjoy the views which are most striking at sunset. I particularly like to see from up there the Ada Bridge and the Genex Tower. A nice running route would pass through the park, from Dorcol to Savamala, instead of going around via the riverbank running paths.

NOVI BEOGRAD

CATEGORIES: City Areas, Neighborhoods

Get Directions: Novi Beograd, Serbia

Novi Beograd means New Belgrade and, as the name already says, it is a recent development. Well, if you consider 1948 recent. But before that, this side of the river was mostly farming land that turned into city with the growth of Belgrade's population after WW2. There is not much in terms of tourist attractions apart from the area by the river with its floating bars and restaurants, easily accessible via the Brankov bridge. Note that the Museum of Contemporary Art, bombed by NATO in the 1990s has been closed for renovations for quite a while.

SAVAMALA

CATEGORIES: City Areas, Dance & Music, Drinking, Neighborhoods

Get Directions: Savamala, Belgrade, Serbia

Savamala is Belgrade's creative and party hub. This area, close to the main train station and running along the banks of the river Sava is full of derelict flats and warehouses that were slowly taken over by cultural centers, discos, restaurants, bars, fashion designers and illustrators. There is a hive of activity in a few blocks that attract people from all over the world with the promise of all-night-long partying as well. For many visitors, Savamala is Belgrade. Well, the area is very nice indeed and you can feel the creative energy in the air. (morganstern.com) It is one of those places where there is more people on the streets at 12midnight than at 12noon.

There is this nice article at The Guardian about the area's developments.

SKADARLIJA

Skadarlija is to Belgrade what Montmartre is to Paris. The cobblestone street is lined with trees, flowers, cute restaurants and street musicians. However, don't think it is exclusively for tourists. Several Belgradians go there and when a visitor from abroad comes to town. (banucciteam.com) The Dva Jelena restaurant has been part of the writers and poets life for a long time. It is a nice area for a stroll and for a touristy dinner or a glass of beer before heading down to Savamala.

With a Latin menu with a focus on Peruvian and Mexican dishes ideal for sharing (think of ceviche, guacamole, tiraditos and quesadillas), Toro is a good option also for vegetarians. The outside area is very nice on sunny afternoons and to watch the sun go down. It can get quite crowded and smoky, but this is Belgrade. There is an English menu and good cocktails pairings.

Daily for dinner. It is wise to make a reservation.

Radost Disco Grill was a great find. I was starving, it was raining and all of a sudden I saw that neon sign outside that said "adults only" that got me intrigued so I went in and "discovered" this den of music and great food. I got there early, so there was a table with two ladies having a glass of wine and just me on the other side of the room. There was a small stage waiting for a band that would play later, promising a lively atmosphere. The food was delicious and the Serbian wine by the glass really conquered me. It is a small place so I would make a reservation. And if you are claustrophobic, better choose somewhere else as the place is rather small, cavernous and when everybody decides to light a cigarette (as they always do in Belgrade) it is easy to suffocate. But smoky rooms generally have good vibes, if you try to look at the positive side. Both Ludost and Mladost are part of the same area, a bar and a club respectively.

Monsun Klub opens late. But it stays open until sunrise. It is a place everybody flocks to after having had quite a few drinks around Savamala. It has space for over 700 people and it can get packed so come here to dance, and dance, and dance as there will be no seats or tables. Check the vibe at the line outside and keep an eye on their programme as there is always a good mix of DJs playing.

Square Nine is my favorite hotel in Belgrade. It is simply outstanding with impressive good taste. The Brazilian architect Isay Weinfeld is behind the hotel's good looks. But it is does not have just looks, Square Nine has consistency. The service is professional, the amenities throughout are well thought of, there is attention in every detail and you just feel awesome while at the hotel. The Japanese restaurant Ebisu is at par with the world's Nobus and Zumas. A gem in the heart of the city. If you are not staying here, at least pay them a visit for a drink, a coffee or a meal.

Moritz Eis is a piece of heaven in the middle of Belgrade (at least for those who love ice cream). Mr Moritz, the Austrian owner how came to Belgrade and decided to stay, has created a lifestyle place based on artisan ice cream. You go to Moritz Eis to feel good, to sit in vintage chairs, chat with friends and, above all, enjoy high quality and creative flavors of ice cream and sorbets. Of course you can buy a few scoops to go, but the place looks so nice you will want to stay, maybe to ask for another cup or cone. The brand is expanding so there are new shops opening up not just in Belgrade (there is a stand at the airport) but also in Romania, Montenegro and Chile (maybe even Uruguay). This cozy and cool little spot on a restored historic building in Savamala is a true find. The hotel mixes old and new with a nice balance. Some of the furniture is designed by local designers. (www.voiceoverherald.com) The rooms are beautiful yet simple, with a kind of Scandinavian feel.

Gradstore embarked on the trend of hunting for local talent in fashion and design to have an amazing selection of clothes, jewelry, accessories and gifts, mostly made in Belgrade. The small shop is a gem and the perfect place to hunt for one-of-a-kind presents to take home. There is a smaller branch inside KC Grad.

Comunale, one of the fancy restaurants at Beton Hala, does excellent Italian food by the river. The pastas and pizzas are delicious and I would recommend you try Serbian wine with your food. When the weather is nice everybody wants to sit outside, but the stylish tables on the inside are my favorites.

Mala Fabrika Ukusa may well be the best local restaurant. Almost everybody I met in Belgrade to whom I asked for recommendations, Mala Fabrika was mentioned. The name translates more or less into Little Factory of Good Taste. The focus is on Serbian dishes, however, they are not prepared the traditional way but with surprising little twists. I did not have a chance to eat here but I walked past the entrance and the place looked cozy and people seemed to be having a great time.
